Marcus Garvey

Marcus Garvey was born on 17th August, 1887. When he was sixteen, he left St. Ann's and went to Kingston where he found a job in a printing office. He joined the printer's Union and took an active part in trade union affairs.

In 1914, after spending some time in England, he returned to Jamaica determined to start a programme which would help the black people of Jamaica and the world to have a better life. He formed the Universal Negro Improvement Association (UNIA) which aimed to unite 'all the Negro peoples of the world to establish a country and Government absolutely their own'. However, he did not get many members in Jamaica and he got into trouble for saying that Jamaica should be governed by black people.

In 1927 he toured the Caribbean and Central America and lectured to the crowds who gathered to hear him speak. He also went to London and Paris to hold large meetings.

Marcus Garvey

Marcus Garvey was the youngest of a Jamaican family of eleven children. In January, 1907, Kingston suffered a huge earthquake. The destruction and fires which followed the earthquake led to terrible food shortages and high prices. The printer's Union went on strike for higher wages. When the strike finished most workers went back to their jobs, but Garvey was sacked because the employers thought that he was the leader of the strike.

In 1916, Marcus left Jamaica again and went to the U.S.A. There he found that the black people were often living in even worse conditions than the black people in Jamaica. He decided then that the best thing for black people would be for them to go back to Africa. Therefore, he started his 'Back to Africa' plan by setting up branches of the UNIA all over America. He toured America making speeches to crowds of people and by 1919 the UNIA had more than two million members.

In 1928 Garvey went back to Jamaica and started his own political party the People's Political Party. However, he and his party were defeated in the election of 1930.

Marcus Garvey

Marcus Garvey was born near St. Ann's Bay, Jamaica. He left school when he was fourteen and trained to be a printer in St. Ann's. While he was learning to be a printer, a terrible hurricane struck Jamaica and his family lost their home and all their possessions.

In 1910, Garvey left Jamaica and travelled in South America where he found that many black people lived in even greater poverty than in Jamaica.

In 1912, Garvey sailed to England where he met students and sailors from India and Africa and learned about their countries. He decided that the only way for black people to be treated fairly was for black people to have their own countries and governments.

In 1922, Garvey spent three years in jail in America and was then sent back to Jamaica.

D

Marcus Garvey.

Marcus Garvey's father was a mason by trade, but there was never enough work for him and so the family had little money. Garvey's mother baked bread and cakes to make extra money to feed the family.

Soon after he lost his job in a printing office, Garvey started a newspaper called 'The Watchman'. The aim of the newspaper was to draw attention to improve their conditions. The newspaper did not last long and it had to close because of lack of money.

In 1919, he started a shipping business called the Black Star Line. Only black people were allowed to contribute money to the business to buy ships. In 1920 the Black Star Line ran into financial difficulties. Garvey was arrested for fraud and was tried in court. He was found guilty and sentenced to five years in jail.

In 1935 he left Jamaica again and sailed to England because he felt that it was pointless for him to stay in Jamaica any longer. He died in poverty in London in 1940.
